New dates for "Managing Antimicrobial Resistance through Behaviour Change."

In light of the current global spread of the Corona virus, we have decided to postpone the 2020 Uppsala Health Summit "Managing Antimicrobial Resistance through Behaviour Change" to 16 - 17 March, 2021. In analyzing the current situation the topic remains extremely pertinent, and we expect that in March 2021 there will be even more important insights based on the development of the current pandemic. We will continue to update information as our summit plans progress.

We know that many of you are directly involved in finding solutions to the Covid 19 crisis, and as we of course hope the best for you and your families we very much appreciate your continued focus on these issues.

We are sorry to have to share this news as many people have started their preparations for the summit, but we are glad that we can use all the preparatory work at the summit next year. In the coming months we will be sharing more information and resources about the summit and we look forward to hearing your thoughts, either by email, below, or on Twitter at #UppsalaHealthSummit.

Healthy Urban Childhoods Post-Conference report

In case you missed it, we are happy to share with you the Post-Conference report from the Healthy Urban Childhoods summit that was held in 2019. The summit had nine thematic workshops whose results are shared in the report.

The Pre-Conference report is also available on our website, along with videos with messages from young people all over the world that were shared at the summit.
